

Garden Areas 8. Fruit orchard

Example of orchard - TSS project

A modest collection of heritage fruit trees are arranged at the end of the central axis of the rose and topiary garden. The trees shall be specially selected to suit the local climate of the site and shall provide both an aesthetic and productive value, in their blossoms and fruits, to the Hall.

Example of fruit trees with bulb underplanting - TSS project

Garden Areas 9. Long borders

Concept sketch of view from bottom of long border facing the Hall

Reference image - Long border, Newby Hall

The south lawn is to become a new formally structured garden. This echoes a pattern made in many great landscape compositions from the early 19th century onwards. An example would be at Newby Hall, Yorkshire, where first a Victorian terrace and then, in the 1920s, a long formal double border was made through what was previously an informal pleasure ground. We suggest a broad framed lawn leading to a central ornate metal gate into the woodland beyond.

