

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION -

The pub signs in one version or another have been up for decades - in fact a couple of hundred years all told.

In our relatively brief ownership we occasionally replaced damaged or weather beaten signs - words changed slightly - new telephone number etc - we didn't realise such minor changes needed consent as they were updates / not new signs.

We now know better - so genuine apologies.

A member of your team has visited & seen the signs - so they know there location etc.

The pub is now leased to another operator - it's now a pub with an Indian restaurant & takeaway.

The leaseholder basically wants to add the name 'Little India' to reflect his business offering.

From my perspective (& I'm assuming yours) he's keen to keep it looking like pub signage - in keeping with the look of the building. His requirements could have been far more dramatic & I'm sure you would have disapproved (so would I).
