Fears over devolution deal talks

Government minister Michael Gove has told council leaders Norfolk risks being "left behind" as devolution deal talks drag on.

Mr Gove confirmed he had been in talks with County Hall leader Kay Mason Billing over the terms of the deal - which will see a transfer of power from Whitehall to the county.

When she took over as leader, Mrs Mason Billing said she would push for more to be included in the deal, which had been agreed in principle by her predecessor.

Mr Gove said: "I do not want Norfolk to be left behind. There are Norfolk issues which we need to iron out."
