earlier this year you pruned this tree for me, having looked at it for me just over a year ago when I first moved into the house. Address: 107 High Street, Linton, Cambridge CB21 4JT.

As I have lived with the tree I have become more concerned about having such a large tree close to the house - it seems to be growing quite fast, too, so I have been wondering if it would be best to take the tree down, much as I dislike doing this. Unfortunately I think it's just in the wrong place for such a large tree and would be a constant cause of anxiety - to me and to the neighbours too.

Gardening for wildlife/nature is important to me so I would plan to plant a couple of native hedgerow plants instead, which would be more manageable in size and arguably better for wildlife.

As you have looked at the tree and dealt with it quite recently it may be that you can give me an opinion or any thoughts you may have on this without coming to see it again? Or if you need to see it again maybe I could arrange for you to do that?

I live in a conservation area so there would be the planning process to go through, which you did for me before.

many thanks in advance for your help

with best wishes
