Dear Sirs

I have submitted the attached request for planning permission to the best of my ability. I wish to add a shower room within the house. The work involved is minimal as I would undertake the building of the stud walls myself and get local electrician and plumber to undertake the remaining work. I would then do the finishing touches myself, doors, tiling etc.

The finished effect would require no alterations to the exterior of the building and no structural modification would be made.

I can only assume that I have made the necessary application (I am not even sure that planning permission is required but I always err on the safe side).

If you require any additional information please do not hesitate to contact me. If you are also of the opinion that planning permission is not required I would be happy if you refund, at least part, of the large fee this application has cost me.

Regards
Malcolm Hayward
