Puckeridge Local Store History

The present building dates from around 1899-1900. It has a rich history as a Grocery store selling everyday Grocery items. Initially trading as Catons Grocery store owned by Thomas White it then passed to Ernest Redding in around 1900. It was split into two in 1925, the North part as Reddings confectioner. The South part Century Stores continued as a grocery store owned by EJ Harris, George Taylor then Ken Bryceason. In 1970 it housed T&F Building supplies before passing to Albert Taylor as The Handy Store. Martin Dawkins ran it as Puckeridge General Stores until 2012. It then became a Tea Room before being purchased by its current owner Ramraj and being returned to an everyday grocery store selling all your daily essentials under the banner of Puckeridge Local store in 2023.
